Re: IB Docket No. 11-109

Dear Ms. Dortch:

It has come to my attention that a company called LightSquared is attempting to launch a nationwide wholesale-only 4G wireless broadband network. This would provide essential services to a huge portion of our country that is currently without broadband access. It would benefit our schools, public safety and emergency efforts. It would spur greater competition between mobile broadband providers and result in lower cost and greater choice of services to the public. LightSquared's launch would also benefit communities hoping to attract new businesses and would create a huge number of jobs.

I have also read that some recent testing in regards to spectrum use may have been "rigged" in favor of GPS proponents who are hoping to block the launch of LightSquared due to problems with their own equipment and misuse of spectrum allocated to LightSquared. Could you please make sure that any test results used to determine the fate of this proposal are fair and unbiased?

Please keep an open mind and do whatever you can to help LightSquared to provide these much-needed services.

Thank you very much for your time,

Sally M. Babcock
